OVERVIEW OF THE CITY OF DALLAS PUBLIC ART PROGRAM

Briefing to the Arts, Culture & Libraries Committee
May 19, 2014

Purpose of the Briefing

- To provide the Arts, Culture & Libraries Committee with an overview of the Public Art Program policy, procedures and outcomes.
- To request the Committee's input to guide the Cultural Affairs Commission's review and updates to the Public Art policy for FY15-16.

Mission Statement

- To enrich the community through the integration of the vision and work of artists into the planning, design and construction of public spaces.

Strengths and Weaknesses

1. Geographic distribution of projects throughout the City
 2. Multiple projects awarded to Texas artists
 3. Working with both emerging and experienced artists
 4. Community participation in the decision-making process
 5. Collaborative process with partner departments
1. Graffiti and vandalism
 2. Funding for maintenance
 3. Limited training opportunities for artists interested in entering the public art field
 4. Complexity of contracting process
 5. Marketing / publications

Public Art

- The term “public art” generally refers to works of art that are planned and executed specifically for a publicly-accessible location.
- “Public art” can be publicly-funded or privately-funded.
- Other terms used are “art in public places,” “civic art” or “percent for art.”
- The first Public Art Ordinance in the nation was adopted in 1959 by the City of Philadelphia.
- Presently, there are over 350 public art programs nationally (at city, county, state and federal levels).

Dallas Public Art Program History

- Pre-1988: The majority of the public artworks in the City's Public Art Collection prior to the adoption of the ordinance are the historic murals, bas reliefs and sculptures in Fair Park. Other artworks came into the City's Public Art Collection through gifts and donations.
- 1987-88: Public Art Plan developed by a 30-member citizen committee co-chaired by Susan Collins and Ida Papert. The committee interviewed hundreds of citizens of Dallas to formulate the Public Art Program profile, adopted in 1988.
- 1988: The City of Dallas adopted the Public Art Ordinance on September 14, 1988 (Resolution # 88-2968).

Charles Umlauf, Spirit of Flight (1961), Dallas Love Field

Dallas Public Art Highlights

- Since the 1988 adoption of the Public Art Ordinance:
 - 100 projects have been commissioned for a variety of city facilities, including cultural centers, parks, libraries, public safety facilities, airports and public right-of-way locations.
 - 4 of these projects were public/private partnerships that leveraged $1.5 million in donations to match the City funds.
 - 34 public artworks have been donated to the City ($10.5 million value of donation).
- The program has received several awards:
 - AIA Dallas Honor Award for Outstanding Achievement (2005)
 - Texas Association for Landscape Design Award for Freedman's Memorial (2004)
 - Americans for the Art conference held in Dallas-showcased Dallas Convention Center floor (1994)

Dallas Public Art Ordinance Summary

- Public Art Ordinance is posted online at http://dallasculture.org/PDFs/COD_Public_Art_Ordinance.pdf (City of Dallas Code, Chapter 2, Sections 2-101 to 2-105)
- The Ordinance specifies the percent of eligible capital projects to be used for Public Art:
 - 1.5 % of the total capital improvement project appropriation or
 - 0.75 % of the total appropriation for a project that is exclusively for street, storm drainage, utility, or sidewalk improvements
 - Bond funds not eligible for conservation and maintenance

Sonia King, Aurora (detail) (2010), Pleasant Grove Branch Library

- The Ordinance establishes an “Art Committee” as a committee of the Cultural Affairs Commission to review and make recommendations for panelists, artists and projects. [Note: this committee is generally known as the “Public Art Committee.”]
- The Art Committee is composed of 11 members: the three at-large Cultural Affairs Commissioners and 8 citizen members appointed by the Chair of the Cultural Affairs Commission.

Montage 48/61 (Charlotte Lindsey and Larry Enge), Moving Cycles, Layers of History and Hope, (2008), Dallas Black Dance Theatre

David Newton, Freedman's Memorial (1996)

- Role of the Cultural Affairs Commission
 - Reviews and approves all recommendations made by the Public Art Committee for artists / projects prior to City contracting
 - Establishes program policies and guidelines.
- Role of the Public Art Committee
 - Oversees quality control of the Public Art Program and projects.
 - Reviews and recommends for approval by the Cultural Affairs Commission the nature and scope of projects and artworks, as well as artists for the Public Art Program.
 - Makes recommendations regarding any issues that arise from a specific artwork or art project.

- Role of the Project Selection Panel/Jury
 - Appointed by Cultural Affairs Commission and Public Art Committee.
 - Meet in open session as many times as necessary to make a recommendation of an artist for the project.
 - Implement the artist selection process based on any parameters established for the project including: site, medium/media, scope of project, ADA requirements, safety and minimal maintenance.
 - Recommend and artist or artist team be commissioned for the project to the Public Art Committee.

Gordon Huether with poetry by Billy Blair and Lowell Smith, Windows to the Soul (2008), The Bridge

- Role of the Office of Cultural Affairs (OCA)
 - Oversee the artist selection process, contracting, design, fabrication and installation phases of project.
 - Manage the processing of artist's invoices for payment by the funding department. OCA Public Art staff ensures that insurance coverage meets City requirements and serves as liaison and communications point for issues related to art installation and construction.
 - Inspect installations and, where required, supervises the inspection by engineers or staff with jurisdiction over the site where the public art is installed.
 - Coordinate communication between the artist and the host department, architects, construction managers, engineers, electricians and other technical staff.
 - Conduct ongoing outreach to prospective public art artists, including periodic presentations and workshops for artists who are interested in becoming public art artists.

Public Art Process

- Multi-step process that involves city department with oversight of the capital project, design team, arts professionals and community representatives, Public Art Committee and Cultural Affairs Commission
 - Step 1: Determine scope of the project
 - Step 2: Solicit and interview artists for the project
 - Step 3: Select and contract an artist for the project
 - Step 4: Execute project

[these steps are detailed in the following slides]

Top: Linnea Glatt, Vigilant (2010), Fire Station 10

Bottom: Bruce Taylor, Untitled 2 (2009), Fire Station 42

Step 1: Determine Scope of Project

- Office of Cultural Affairs meets with Partner Departments to discuss the capital project, opportunities for public art, budget issues, and identify project stakeholders.
- A community meeting with neighborhood stakeholders may be convened to gather information and community representatives are identified for participation in the selection process.
- The scope of the project is presented to the Public Art Committee for review and final recommendation.
- Public Art Committee / Cultural Affairs Commission appoint a Selection Panel.

Anitra Blayton, Kidd 24/7
(2010), Kidd Springs Park

- The Composition of Artist Selection Panel is defined in the City's Cultural Policy:
 - At least three but no more than five voting members (six for Park projects).
 - A variable number of non-voting members.
 - Every effort will be made to ensure minority representation.

Voting Members

- One (two for Park projects) representative(s) from the neighborhood or community in which the artwork will be located.
- Two to three artists and arts or design professionals (i.e., curators, collectors, administrators, architects) selected by the Public Art Committee/Cultural Affairs Commission from a pre-approved list.
- One design professional (architect, landscape architect, engineer) representing the City.

Non-Voting Advisors to the Selection Panel may include, but are not limited to:

- The design architect and/or engineer.
- The project manager from the City department responsible for construction.
- A member of the Public Art Committee who acts as liaison to the Public Art Committee.
- Public Art Staff members.
- A representative from the City department with management responsibility for the property where the artwork or artplace will be located.
- The Cultural Affairs Commissioner for the district in which the project will be done.
- Additional community members.

Step 2: Solicit and interview artists for the project

- Artist solicitation method is based on the project art budget:
 - Over $100,000: Call for artists (RFQ) is published on an international posting.
 - Under $100,000: Short-list from Public Art Committee-approved Pre-qualified list.
 - Departments may request a specific artist for a commission.
- Selection Panel reviews artists applications and identifies artists finalists (generally 3-4)
- OCA works with the finalist artists to develop a site specific proposal that responds to the project's parameters / limitations.
- Artists finalists make a presentation to the Selection Panel or Public Art Committee, outlining their idea(s) for the public art project and demonstrating how it meets the defined scope of the project.

Step 3: Select and Contract an Artist for the Project

- Selection Panel reviews finalists' proposals and recommends one proposal for the project for proposals over $100,000.
- For project less than $100,000 site specific proposals are reviewed by the Public Art Committee.
- Public Art Committee recommends Artist.
- Cultural Affairs Commission reviews and adopts (or not) Public Art Committee's recommendation.
- OCA works with the City Attorney's Office to develop the artist contract
- City contracts the artist for the project.
 - Consistent with City's contracting rules, contracts over $50,000 are presented to City Council for approval and contracts under $50,000 are approved through Administrative Action.

Step 4: Execute project

- OCA manages artists' contracts, communicates with appropriate department on scheduling and other project management issues.
- Artist fabricates and installs the approved design and submits final documentation (which includes conservation and maintenance plan) to OCA.
- Public Art Project is accessioned into the City Public Art Collection.
- OCA works with the Partner Department to schedule a dedication or unveiling event to celebrate the completion of the project.

Rex Kare, Air on Blake (2009), Lochwood Branch Library

Public Art Gifts to the City

- City Cultural Policy also establishes policies for gifts of art to the City
 - Cultural Affairs Commission / Public Art Committee review potential donations considering aesthetic, financial, safety/maintenance, and environmental factors.
 - OCA serves as the coordinating department for any gifts of art to the City.
 - Since 2009, 34 works have been accepted by the City; these works have a value of $10.5 million dollars.

Long-Term Care of Public Art

- There are two areas in the Cultural Policy where the issue of long-term care of the artwork is considered:
- Criterion for the artwork selection:
 - Permanence of the artwork, defined as “consideration should be given to structural and surface integrity and stability to permanence, protection against theft, vandalism, and weathering, as well as to the probability of excessive maintenance and repair costs.”
- Responsibility of the artist:
 - The art as fabricated and installed will be free of defects in material and craftsmanship, including but not limited to, any defects constituting inherent vice or qualities which cause or accelerate deterioration.
 - Reasonable maintenance of the art will not require procedures or materials substantially in excess of those described in the maintenance recommendations.

Brower Hatcher and Marly Rogers, Sky (2013), Love Field

- Beginning in 2009, maintenance considerations were strengthened, with a requirement that all new commissions demonstrate that little or no maintenance will be required.
 - Works completed since 2009 typically have not required more than simple cleaning or dusting. These can be conducted by the management of the site where the art is located.
 - Projects that have involved electrical or lighting use LED technologies with projected life spans of at least 20 years
 - Artists are required to identify and submit guidelines on upkeep and maintenance pertinent to the specific materials used to create the work.

- The City of Dallas funded annual maintenance and repair of public art in its collection from 1989-2009. Budget cuts in FY2009-10 have not yet been restored.
- Prior to 2009, OCA implemented a planned approach to maintenance:
 - The collection was assessed on a three-year cycle (one-third of the collection assessed every year).
 - The assessment identified 12-15 works that represented the greatest need for conservation; OCA contracted conservators to provide the conservation or maintenance treatment.
 - Repairs related to vandalism were addressed on an ongoing basis.
 - A limited number of public artworks have maintenance arrangements in place:
 - Marta Pan's Floating Sculpture at City Hall is maintained by the Dallas Museum of Art.
 - Cancer Survivor's Plaza and Portal Slice are maintained by Downtown Dallas through conservators recommended by OCA.
 - City Place projects are maintained by the Uptown PID through conservators recommended by OCA.

Public Art Benefits

- Creative Placemaking: Public art, as an element of urban design, serves to define public spaces, provide pedestrian amenities in the urban environment, and serve as landmarks that contribute to neighborhoods identity.
- Economic Impact: Public art supports jobs – directly as artists employ foundries, framers, technical assistants, computer programmers and engineers, and indirectly as artists purchase supplies and materials from regional suppliers.
- Civic Engagement: Public Art promotes the community's awareness, commemoration or celebration of its history.

Promoting Dallas as a Cultural Destination

- Iconic public art projects become destinations for visitors to the City
- In Dallas, examples of high profile public art include:
 - Pioneer Plaza, frequent site of tour bus stops and photo ops
 - New public art at Love Field Modernization Program (2012-2014) engages 8 million passengers annually and all sports teams go through Love Field.
 - Traveling Man (a DART commission) is a frequent site of engagement and bridal photo shoots
 - Pegasus on the Magnolia Hotel, The Dallas Piece by Henry Moore and Floating Sculptures by Marta Pan are frequently featured in films that are shot in Dallas.
 - Light Veil, newly installed at the Cotton Bowl by MacArthur Fellow James Carpenter will be seen in all published images of the Cotton Bowl at this point.
