Paul Hansen, Chief
Dallas Marshal's Office
City of Dallas

Background

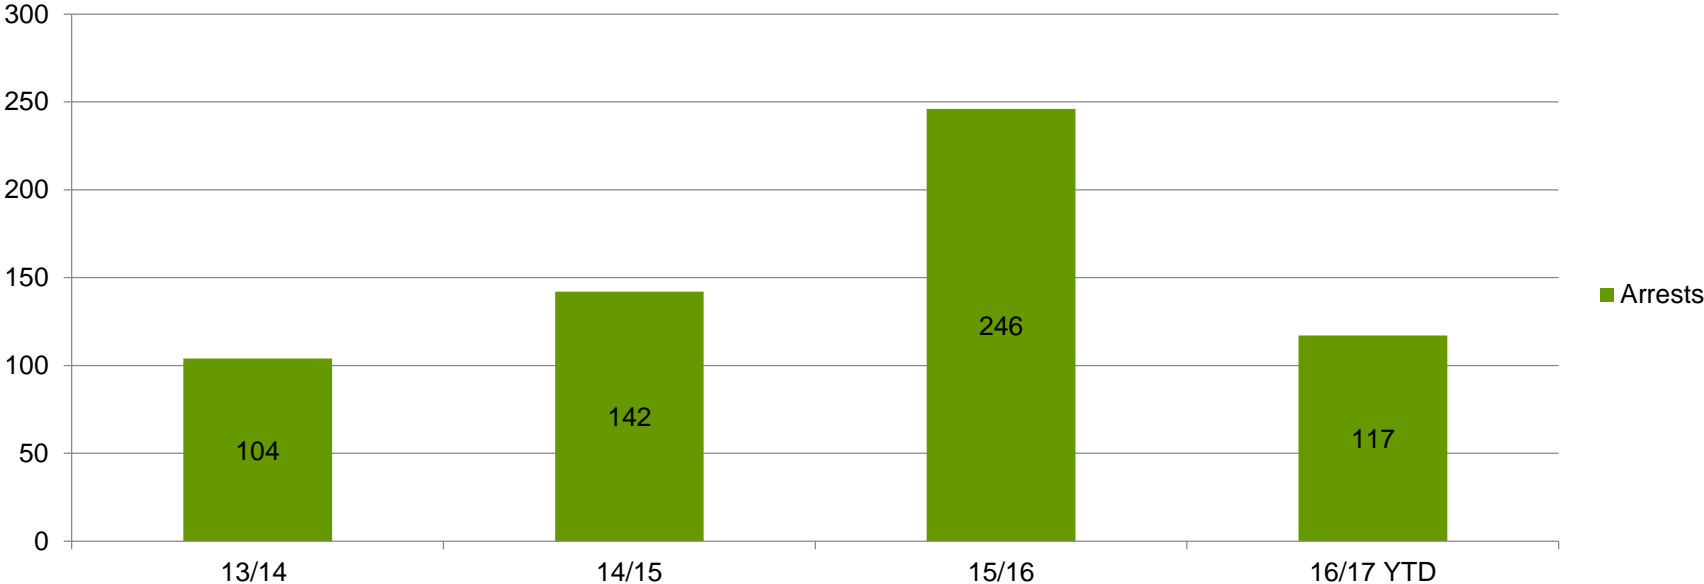

- The Dallas Marshal's Office received a grant in 2008 to purchase 4 analog surveillance systems.
- Those systems had limited data storage and batteries required daily replacement.
- In most cases still Deputy Marshals relied on physical surveillance of dumpsites to catch offenders.

Purpose

- The Marshal's Office sought to purchase updated surveillance equipment.
- High quality digital video cameras and digital rapid deployment cameras were purchased and deployment of those systems began midyear in FY14.
- Evidence from the new cameras quickly yielded an increase in illegal dumping arrests.

Operational Impact

- The offender pictured committed four offenses in one week.

Operational Impact

- Cameras allow detectives to view multiple participants in an illegal dumping offense.
- Each participant is charged separately for the same dumping offense.

Next Steps

- Dallas Marshals will continue seeking improvements for surveillance and enforcement, and providing regular updates to the Quality of Life & Environment Committee.
